Check gage at http://waterdata.usgs.gov/usa/nwis/uv?site_no=07164500. At low levels, below 2', best below 1.5', fishing the Arkansas is like fishing any other braided prairie river. Anglers target the heads and tails of pools, drop heavy flies behind large rocks or slide streamer flies into main channel currents and let them swing with the current and strip them back up the seam between the main flow and slower water along a rocky or sandy shelf. Stand in slow flowing water on a sandy flat about waist deep and cast out to the main current to find the best hookups.
